

Stacked Rock Pottery By Darla Morris

I am a native Texan and have lived in Granbury for the last 10 years. I found “clay” about 19 years ago when I took my first pottery class in Mansfield, Texas, and was immediately hooked! I started out on the wheel but soon discovered handbuilding. I love all aspects of clay art and have tried many but always seem to come home to handbuilding. Handbuilding allows me to add as much texture as I want and to build as large as I want. So, for me, that’s a win-win. Since I have no formal art education, to further my skills I have taken many workshops from well known potters such as Don Rietz, Pete Pinnell, Lana Wilson, Steven Hill, just to name a few.

I have been President of the Texas Pottery & Sculpture Guild for four years and Treasurer for five years. We have two annual pottery shows which I participate in and have been the featured artist several times.

I love making pottery and most of my pottery is functional. That means that you can use it to serve food in, put it in the dishwasher and put it in the microwave too.

It is my goal that you use and enjoy your piece or pieces of my pottery everyday.
